Amercanex Opens Canadian Headquarters

In April, Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau introduced legislation to legalize the recreational use of cannabis across Canada, introducing a wave of new companies intent on capturing a piece of the market.

Amercanex was approached about opening an office in Canada. After careful consideration, they decided to expand internationally.

New president Dennis Garces opened the Toronto headquarters this month. The Canadian office follows the same approach in the United States - working with government regulators, manufacturers and vendors to deliver solutions to the cannabis industry.

Amercanex will be launching the ACExchange online marketplace, as well as ACEtrak and ACEpay, in Canada.

A Message from the CEO

When Amercanex launched three years ago, we had to explain our industry to almost every person we encountered. There weren't many people who understood and embraced the idea of a cannabis marketplace.

Fast forward to today, when medical marijuana is overwhelmingly supported by voters, news outlets regularly cover the industry and Canada announced the entire country will be going legal.

I am a firm believer in safely regulating the cannabis market. As with any industry, government oversight, transparency and safety are paramount. That's why we created ACExchange, the first fully electronic marketplace. Once we got started, we realized there was a need for seed to sale tracking, and ACEtrak was born. In response to a lack of banking solutions, we created ACEpay.

These platforms are creating answers for the cannabis industry, and we couldn't be more excited to work with you all.

Regards,

Steve Janjic, Amercanex CEO
